*It's a new day in the fight against Complex
Regional Pain
Syndrome/Reflex
Sympathetic
Dystrophy*

What is CRPS/RSD?

Complex Regional Pain Syndrome (CRPS), also known as Reflex Sympathetic Dystrophy (RSD), is a chronic pain condition characterized by continuous, intense and often burning, pain that is out of proportion to the severity of the original injury.

Symptoms can include changes in the skin color and temperature of the affected body part, as well as skin sensitivity, sweating and swelling.

For more information on CRPS/RSD, please visit the National Institutes of Health's website at:

Celebrating Color The World Orange 2014

The inaugural Color The World Orange in 2014 was celebrated across the globe.

Forty-four proclamations were obtained from U.S. states and cities recognizing Color The World Orange and November as CRPS/RSD awareness month.

Buildings in New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Indianapolis and Charlotte were lit orange, as were bridges in New York, Oklahoma City and a fountain in Australia.

One supporter ran the 2014 New York City Marathon while another completed a 200 mile bike ride through the U.K.

There was media coverage in the U.S. and U.K., including mentions on BBC radio and on a Colorado television news program.

About Us

Color The World Orange is an annual global event held the first Monday of November to spread awareness of Complex Regional Pain Syndrome, also known as Reflex Sympathetic Dystrophy.

The easiest way to get involved is to wear orange and share a photo on social media with the hashtag:
#CRPSORANGEDAY

Working together we can bring attention to this poorly-understood condition.

Color The World Orange is an independent initiative and not associated with any organization.
